

Steven McCullough, MBA

Vice President of Community Partnerships
Greater Chicago Food Depository

At the Greater Chicago Food Depository, McCullough leads the strategy to establish, maintain, and improve relationships with community partners to address hunger and increase food access across Cook County collaboratively. McCullough also serves as a Center for Neighborhood Technology board member, an Annie E. Casey Foundation Children Family Fellowship Program fellow, a British American Project fellow, and a Leadership Greater Chicago fellow. Previously McCullough served as director of finance and executive vice president at the Chicago Association of Neighborhood Development Organizations, as chief operating officer and president/CEO of Bethel New Life, and as chief operating officer of the Safer Foundation. McCullough holds a bachelor of business administration degree from Loyola University of Chicago and a master of business administration degree from the University of Chicago.