The Institute for Healthcare Improvement's Open School exists to advance quality improvement and patient safety competencies in the next generation of health professionals. Launched in 2008, the Open School includes a growing catalog of 23 online courses that teach the foundations of improvement, safety, system design, and leadership. More than 175,000 students, faculty, and professionals are part of the Open School's interprofessional community, which includes Chapters in more than 60 countries around the world. The IHI Open School courses are free for all students, residents, and faculty, and available to health care professionals for a modest annual fee.

Professionals looking to gain improvement skills, and organizations looking to train staff and build improvement capability, can purchase annual subscriptions to the IHI Open School online courses. More than 400 organizations have integrated the courses into their training programs and many have already started to see a dramatic shift in their culture. Nurses, physicians, and pharmacists in the United States can earn more than 25 contact hours by taking the Open School courses. The courses are also approved by the National Association for Healthcare Quality (NAHQ) to provide CPHQ CE credit.
