Director

Scripps Translational Science Institute

Topol is a leading practitioner of digital medicine. In addition to his role at the Scripps Translational Science Institute, Topol is co-founder of the West Wireless Health Institute, professor of genomics at The Scripps Research Institute, chief academic officer of Scripps Health, and chief medical advisor at AT&T. He has been editor-in-chief at Medscape since 2013.

Topol, a practicing cardiologist, is widely credited with leading the Cleveland Clinic to become the #1 center for heart care. While there, he also started a new medical school, led many worldwide clinical trials to advance care for heart disease patients, and spearheaded the discovery of multiple genes that increase susceptibility for heart attacks. He has developed many medications routinely used in medical practice. Topol is one of the top 10 most cited researchers in medicine and has published 1100 peer-reviewed articles and more than 30 medical textbooks. Among his many accomplishments, Topol was #1 on Modern Healthcare's list of the "50 Most Influential Physician Executives in the United States" in 2012 and was named one of GQ's 12 "Rock Stars of Science" in 2009. He is also a member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences.
